Dear Sally,

Reaching the point of comfortable success in my technology career was through hard work and good luck. However, there always seemed to be dimensions in rounding out my business and professional social life that I could see but couldn't quite accomplish. Either I would get busy and sidetracked, or I would just procrastinate and other, seemingly more important goals, would eclipse my earlier goals. Sally Pera of PeraConnect worked with me to help clarify my goals, coached me to stay on track, and made direct introductions to key people and companies to meet my goals. It's been an extremely successful experience and those important dimensions of my life are now coming to fruition.

The process has been extraordinary and easy from my perspective. Ms. Pera not only connected me solidly to the people who we discussed as possible contacts for me, but she also made surprise introductions which became extremely rewarding personally and professionally. At the start of working with PeraConnect I was looking to raise my visibility in Silicon Valley and increase my exposure to a select group of professionals. What I experienced was a boost to an exciting level of networking with movers and shakers in the Valley.

Best regards,

Rock L. Clapper, Ph.D.
